It is recalled that Article 9 of Netgem's articles of association contains a clause imposing a threshold-crossing disclosure obligation in addition to the one relating to statutory thresholds:

"Without prejudice to applicable legal provisions, any shareholder coming to hold a number of shares equal to or greater than 2% of the total number of shares, or a multiple thereof, is required, within fifteen days of crossing each such ownership threshold, to inform the Company of the total number of shares it holds, by registered letter with acknowledgement of receipt sent to the registered office.

Failing disclosure under the above conditions, the shares constituting the excess holding shall be stripped of voting rights for any shareholders' meeting held until the expiry of a two-year period following the date on which the notification is regularised, if the failure has been recorded and if one or more shareholders holding at least 2% of the share capital so request under the conditions provided for by law.

Under the same conditions, the voting rights attached to those shares which have not been duly disclosed may not be exercised or delegated by the defaulting shareholder."

The above is an unofficial English translation of Article 9 of the Company's articles of association, provided for information purposes only. Only the French version is authoritative.
