

Pathé and Netgem are deepening their collaboration to preserve cinematic heritage.

Paris, June 4, 2025

Pathé and Netgem announce a long-term partnership focused on the preservation of cinematic works. They will establish and operate a secure, private facility at ECLAIR by Netgem near Auxerre designed for the long-term storage and preservation of Pathé's film and audiovisual assets.

This new, modern and scalable facility will meet stringent preservation standards and integrate with the ECLAIR Media Assets Management system.

This partnership builds on the long-standing relationship of trust between Pathé and ECLAIR and their shared commitment to protecting and promoting French cultural heritage. It recognizes ECLAIR's established expertise in the field of preservation and heritage engineering, where they currently conserve over 80% of French cinema and audiovisual works.

"Pathé's renewed trust validates our strategic commitment to the sovereign preservation and promotion of cinematographic heritage" says Mathias HAUTEFORT, CEO of Netgem.

"This partnership aims to ensure the preservation of our cinematographic heritage in a unique and secure location, thus protecting our vast and precious catalog in order to continue to promote these works and ensure their transmission to current and future audiences" confirms Ardavan SAFAEE, President of Pathé Films.

About Pathé Films

Pathé Films stands as one of Europe's foremost studios, producing and distributing approximately a dozen films annually for theatrical release and streaming platforms. Since 2012, Pathé has significantly focused on heritage promotion, having digitized and restored over 150 iconic films, primarily in 4K resolution. This initiative enables audiences to experience these seminal works in optimal conditions, across theaters, video-on-demand and television broadcasts.

About Netgem

Netgem provided technology and services for the video entertainment industry, focusing on two product platforms. Upstream, under the Eclair brand, it offers services for entertainment content publishers. Downstream, under the PLEIO brand, manages streaming services, delivering content and technologies to telecom operators. The core common objective is to enable customers to provide accessible entertainment offers to all, as reflected in the Group's tagline, "everyone's entertained".

NETGEM shares are listed on Euronext Growth (ISIN: FR0004154060, Reuters: ETGM.PA, Bloomberg: ALNTG FP).
